Science Building decision Hinges on the Legislature And the Board of Regents

By Sandra Joy Adkins

The decision to finish the Science Building project like it is supposed to be lies with the Board of Regents and the Legislature, according to Dean E. S. Hanrahan of the College of Science.

The project is now expected to cost $5.8 million more than the originally expected $12.3 million. Hanrahan said he did not know the specific categories of expenses that are going to be more than the anticipated budget.

The original plan was to completely renovate the old building to match the new one but the Board of Regents has now agreed only to air condition the old section and do some plumbing and electrical work, he said.

"It is going to be almost impossible to work without the renovation," he said. "We'll be working in a building half of which is brand new while the other half is 30 years old."

However, Ed Grose, vice chancellor for administrative affairs, said the architects and faculty members at Marshall were supposed to plan the project so that including inflation, it would cost within the $12.3 million that the Board of Regents approved in 1975.

"The cost of Phase I of the project (the addition) came in at $8 million instead of the planned $5.8 million," he said. "A lot of things were included in the addition that the faculty wanted which leaves less money for the renovation."

He said everything that had been hoped for in the renovation of the old building could not be accomplished because of the higher cost of the addition.

After the architects fees are paid, Grose said about $3.5 million would be left to fund the renovation. He said some thought had been given to additional funding for the project but BOR members rejected the idea because "the line had to be drawn on how much we were going to spend for the project so we stuck to the original $12.3 million."

Problems with ventilation, plumbing and electrical wiring are examples of what Hanrahan said he expects from the old section without the needed renovation.

"We are going to get some additional funds but at this point, it doesn't look like it will be completed," he said. "However, the BOR has to supply the money to bring the building up to the state fire marshal's standards."

Despite the money problems, Hanrahan said the addition will be completed according to schedule, in May or June of 1984.

As a result of the higher cost of the Science Building addition, the College of Science equipment budget has been cut by $600,000.

"Terming that a disaster is putting it lightly," he said. "In the end it will be the students who will suffer."

Two openings left in College of Science

The College of Science has two vacancies left to fill, according to E. S. Hanrahan, dean of the college.

Malvina F. Balca, assistant professor of mathematics, recently resigned. That position and the one previously held by Marc J. Bechard, assistant professor of biology, are still open, Hanrahan said.

"We have been lucky in that those who have been hired for other vacant positions are very qualified," he said. "Most of the applicants have come from other universities."

Hanrahan said the equipment situation in the College of Science is getting desperate.

"The condition of microscopes, for example, directly affects the students but there is no way for us to buy any new ones or fix the old ones that are broken," he said. "Also, you can't teach a physics class without quality electronic equipment."

The College of Science addition has been cut by $600,000 due to the higher cost of the Science Building addition.

J-School accreditation on the line in '84

By Rose Hutchinson

Marshall University's W. Page Pitt School of Journalism faces the possibility of losing its news-editorial sequence accreditation, according to Director Dr. Deryl R. Leaming.

He said the school has been accredited since 1977 by the American Council on Education in Journalism, but is up for review Feb. 2 and 3, 1984.

"We are due to be visited this year for accreditation," he said, "but we are trying to get a postponement because of changes in the school."

Marshall's journalism school was due for evaluation last year but received an extension because of various changes within the school such as expansion in curriculum and bringing in more outside professionals for seminars.

Leaming said different changes were facing the school this year in that three new staff members have been hired and three faculty positions have opened.

"If we had had perfect vision, we probably wouldn't have postponed. I hope it works out," Leaming said. "We're trying to persuade them to see things our way."

"It (accreditation) certifies the school to have met certain standards," he said.

Other positive aspects of accreditation include increases in scholarship funds and state monies to guarantee meeting of the council's requirements. If the journalism school were to lose its accreditation, Leaming said, there would be a possibility of losing some of the funding.

Leaming said preparations were being made for the evaluation this year although an extension has been requested.

"I hope it (the extension) will work out," Leaming said. "A journalism program must file a report and conduct a self-study prior to the visit from the council."

"I'm putting everything together," he said. "We've already done most of it."

Leaming expressed confidence that the school would continue to be accredited even if a postponement were not granted. Despite uncertainty because of changes in faculty, he said a request had been made to the council to include the public relations and broadcast sequences in accreditation if the standards were met.

"I don't think we'll lose it," he said. "It will probably not affect students that much."

Leaming said possible repercussions from the loss of accreditation could include less allocations of funds and a decrease in scholarship donations. He said he did not think it would have any effect on recruiting efforts within the school.

Marshall's journalism school is one of 80 journalism schools that have received accreditation out of several hundred total schools across the United States. Leaming said to be an accredited school, specific standards set by the council have to be met and the school must heed any suggestions the group makes during its evaluation.

One position filled; two vacancies remain in J-School

By Debra A. Jackson

Filling faculty vacancies has been the biggest problem in the past 10 years for Dr. Deryl R. Leaming, director of the School of Journalism, but he said he has seen the school develop from a "weak and struggling" department to a school producing quality students.

Leaming, who is leaving this month to take a position as chairman of the Department of Communications at Georgia State University, will be succeeded temporarily by Wallace E. Knight, associate professor of journalism.

The other opening in the School of Journalism, that of the Gannett Distinguished Professor Chair, vacated by the May retirement of Professor Thomas D. Davis, has been filled, Leaming said.

The Gannett chair is underwritten by the Gannett newspaper chain which pays most of the salary.

Leaming, who came to Marshall as chairman of the Department of Journalism in 1973 from the University of Tulsa, called faculty vacancies his "biggest headache as director."

He said he does not expect the directorship position to be filled before next fall. Only three or four qualified persons have applied for the position and Leaming said the biggest problem with recruiting has been the lack of qualified professors.

"In the 10 years I've been here, it's been the same problem. We advertise nationally, and there have been times in the past when we've had one qualified person apply. It's great if you're looking, but it's difficult if you're trying to fill a position," he said.

Leaming described the School of Journalism, which was then the Department of Journalism when he came to

Marshall, as "weak and struggling."

"We were unaccredited; there were financial problems. There was $1,200 in the W. Page Pitt Scholarship Fund and there is nearly $80,000 now," he said.

In addition, the Gannett Chair has been added, journalism enrollment has nearly doubled, curriculum changes have been made, and a number of sequences have been added, he said.

Facilities have also improved and internships have increased four or five times the amount since 1973, he said. This summer, there were 23 journalism internships.

"Ten years ago (editors) didn't even want to talk to me about our graduates," he said. "We had a handful, but not nearly the number of qualified students as now," he said.

OURS/YOURS

Closed-door policies becoming trend

Closed door policies seem to be the going thing now-a-days. Or perhaps it should be said, "closed mouth policies."

This is in reference to the mysterious aura surrounding the resignation of Dr. Robert B. Hayes and just exactly what was happening in the Athletic Department. No one seems to want to let the cat out of the bag. It has been three months since Hayes left and no one is any wiser as to reasoning behind the act.

In an interview with The Parthenon this week, Athletic Director Lynn Snyder refused to comment on the amount of the deficit. It has been more than a month since the beginning of the new fiscal year. If the department has done any type of accounting, the deficit amount should be known. Apparently Snyder is more interested in the up-coming football and basketball seasons than how the outstanding bills from last year are going to be paid.

Snyder's no comment attitude has become a bit of a bore. But the Athletic Department is certainly not the only institution that has implemented the policy. Public information about any significant issue has been lacking at Marshall.

But Snyder's attitude is in keeping with the Board of Regents, who have nothing to say about any of the situations. From the beginning of the publicity of Hayes' dismissal to date, no answers or reasons have been forthcoming from that quarter.

Perhaps the Athletic Department and the BOR are just following the lead of the state auditor's office. Obtaining information from Charleston has been a tiresome task. The auditor's office that is conducting the athletic audit refused to release the information concerning an audit of the 1982-83 budget which was concluded in mid-summer. Snyder said that the Athletic Department had not seen any results of that audit, and as far as he knew no one in Marshall's administration had seen any of the figures. We fail to see any purpose in an audit if the results are not released. There would be no pressure to get departments to clean up bookkeeping.

And so, speculation about the Athletic Department finances and Hayes' forced resignation continue and the truth is withheld. It is unfortunate the Athletic Department has opted to follow precedents set by the state auditor's office and the BOR in Charleston. More is expected of an institute of higher education. The public deserves to know the answers to the deficit questions, the resignation questions and any other information concerning the Marshall community. We urge those that have the knowledge to reveal the truth and clear up rumors circulating about issues of such vital importance to the public.

An interview with Dr. Lynn Snyder

Athletic director speaks on b audits and the state of Marsh

By Rose Hutchinson and Joe Harris

Q. What is the status of the audit on the Athletic Department?

A. Well the auditors have been in about three weeks. All I can tell you is that they've been here conducting an audit for approximately three weeks, maybe a little more.

Q. When will they be through?

A. I really don't know. I think the indication that we got is that my guess would be the end of this month. But I'm sure that could vary. I think that's when they'd like to complete the audit.

Q. What will the audit contain? How is it structured?

A. I have no idea. Again, auditors are in and they're looking at our business office records, of course, and that's all I know.

Q. What major steps have been taken to correct the budget problem?

A. Well, basically what we've done is to restructure our spending over the next fiscal year, so that we can hopefully take care of any deficits by June of '84. There have been a considerable number of cuts that have been made in just about every area of operation. We've tried to do as much of the cuts in administrative areas as we could. And take fewer cuts that directly affect sports programs and that type of thing. But at the same time really there's no area of the Athletic Department that hasn't been affected to some extent by budget cutbacks. And of course, as you know, included in that was the elimination of two sports -- men's tennis and women's golf.

Q. How much revenue will be retained by eliminating those sports?

A. You mean save? Off the top of my head, I would say in the vicinity of probably $35-40,000 next year.

Q. How much money has come in through the Big Green Foundation as compared to last year?

A. We're, as you know, we attempted to encourage people to give to the Big Green and purchase tickets early. And we've been very successful in that area. We're right now compiling some data that we'll get out. Until we issue a report and get the final figures, I'd rather not talk about figures other than to say that we've had a very positive response both in terms of Big Green and also in terms of ticket sales.

Q. How much money is to come in through student activity fees?

A. Approximately 500, well right about $504,000 is what we estimated.

Q. How much money is expected to come in through tickets?

A. Last year football ticket revenues were about $190,000 and (men's) basketball was approximately $350,000.

Q. Is the money coming in from student fees an increase from last year and is that increase due to the raise in student fees?

A. Yes, that is correct. Last year we budgeted about $440,000.

Q. Did a decrease in summer enrollment hurt the student fees any?

A. No, because we don't get any athletic fee from summer session anyway. So that has no effect on us.

Q. What about a decrease in fall enrollment?

A. There's no question that would affect us. We try to safeside it and indications are right now anyway, it looks like from what we've been able to gather, that we should be in the ballpark of what we've projected in terms of full-time enrollment. As you know, it's just full-time students that we get the fee from.

Q. What effect has Coach Zuffelato's leaving had on the department?

A. Bob was doing an excellent job in the new capacity in terms of trying to increase our fund raising activities and promotional activities especially outside of the immediate area. We're going to try to pick up that slack for the next few months with our present staff. I think that that position is still an important one. In fact, as you are aware, it is one we created really two years ago. And I think that we need someone working in that area and I would hope that somewhere in the future we would be able to replace Bob.

Q. Are you advertising for a replacement now?

A. No, we won't do that for a while. Right now it will depend on how our revenues and what our budget situation looks like in probably December or January. If it looks at that time like we would be in a situation where we could replace him, then that's when the decision would be made. With that position, most of the work in terms of the winter is planning and most of those activities really take place in the summer and of course during the football season and the early part of basketball season. If we were to go out and hire someone right now really because of the timing involved, there's not an awful lot they could be doing to help us this year. So again, in terms of filling the position, if we were to do so, it would be just as affective to wait until after the first of the year.

Q. What happens to the money for his salary? Is the money re-allocated?

A. We won't allocate anywhere. There may be some adjustments to our budget but it's not solely determined on the availability of those funds.

Q. What is the present amount of the deficit?

A. I wouldn't want to comment on that at this time. The only thing I would say is that, and this goes back to one of your previous questions, in terms of what our projections were a few months ago when we submitted our budget to the Board of Regents, and in terms of when we felt like we'd be able to get ourselves back where we'd like to be, the projections we made at that time in terms of expenditures and incomes, we're very much in line with that. The only thing I'll say, not mentioning anything about deficits is that we're right now pleased with the progress we've made in terms of trying to get the situation straightened out.

Q. In a previous article (The Parthenon, April 5, 1983) you said the projected amount of the deficit was $160,000. Are the actual results near that number?

A. Again, right now, until we get more figures in and that sort of thing, I just wouldn't want to comment at this point.

Q. How much input did former President Hayes have in the Athletic budget?

A. Well, you know, I think, that the procedure which we followed was that we presented a budget to our Athletic Committee and it was then, of course, forwarded to the President for his approval. So both the Athletic Committee and the President's office had been involved with the budget in terms of looking at it and approving it. One of the problems and one of the things, in fact you might go back a couple of years and look at some articles that were in The Parthenon, one of my concerns that I expressed since I've been here is that the about a million two or a million three of our budget is dependent on unknowns -- attendance at football and basketball games, fund-raising efforts, concessions which are obviously directly related to what your attendance is at a ballgame and if you're off ten percent, you're off $120 or $130,000. I've always felt that, and I think if you'll talk to programs around the country, especially those that have large revenues, have built up reserve funds in order to take care of situations like happened to us last year. Marshall has never been in a position to do that. In fact last year was the first time that we and other agencies like ours, got approval to establish reserve funds. But again, when so much of your income is based on the unknown, and we've tried to be conservative in estimating income, I think. If you look at last year's estimates, I felt we were conservative at the time because we didn't project any increases in either football or basketball and as a matter of fact, budgeted less money. So it's one of those things, that again, that a program like ours needs a reserve funds so that when you run into that unusual year, you're not placing yourself in a deficit situation.

Budget deficits hail athletics

DR. LYNN SNYDER
Director of Athletics

Q. The reserve fund was approved by the President last year, correct?

A. It was approved last year for the first time for us to establish and what our goal is, we would like to... I feel like your reserve fund ought to be about 10 percent of your total budget which in our case would be about $200,000. So again, our goal is try and establish a reserve fund of somewhere in the vicinity of $200,000 just as quickly as it is feasible for us to do so.

Q. When do you expect to implement the reserve fund?

A. Well, that is very difficult to say. If we had a great year in football and basketball you could almost establish one overnight with a very successful year. I think realistically that I would hope that within three years we would be able to establish one. One of the things we're doing is... of course we have reduced our budget by somewhere in the vicinity of about $160,000. We are carrying over in this year's budget approximately $190,000. We're carrying over $190,000 in the budget we proposed to the Board of Regents. If we can come out even at the end of this fiscal year, we are in effect, picking up in the next fiscal year $190,000. Because, hopefully, that money will be paid and when we start looking at '84-'85, we should be $190,000 ahead. Of course we're going to have some inflation and some other things take part of that money as always. But hopefully some of that $190 and take then and in '84-'85 and start establishing a reserve fund.

Q. What will the reserve fund cover? Will it cover the deficit and other unexpected expenses?

A. That is correct. It will be a fund that is set aside simply to cover those years when and situations where you have unforeseen expenses for one reason or another in any fiscal year.

Q. Wouldn't the reserve fund be depleted if there were two consecutive lean years?

A. Well what you have to do is... well it at least gives you the breathing room to make adjustments. For instance, if we had had a reserve fund right now, we would have been able to take care of all our obligations. We still would have had to make adjustments in the next fiscal year to maintain a reserve fund. In other words, a reserve fund is no good unless you make adjustments and pay your reserve fund back when you have to use it. But the thing it will protect you from is to be able to stay current with your bills.

Q. What is the overall state of the Athletic Department right now?

A. I think it's good. I would say this and you're totally aware of the fact as I am of the campus situation. I think that, and this is not a reflection on anything except the state of affairs and the state of the economy, but as you know, Marshall's been hit and higher education's been hit very hard in the last two or three years. No salary increases for two years. There are equipment needs all over this campus. My feeling is in of course our own particular situation we've had even more severe and tougher budget problems. I think the overall morale of our staff is good considering again the economics we've all been through. I'm very optimistic about this next year. I think that the key to our success in terms of budget is football and basketball. That's where we generate most of our revenue. I think we've got good home schedules in both football and basketball and I think that we're going to be competitive in both football and basketball. I think we'll be competitive in football and have a good season. I think there is a lot of excitement in anticipation of basketball this year. We've got WVU (West Virginia University) and Cincinnati, and Marquette in a good home schedule and Rick (Basketball Coach Rick Huckabay) has done a real good job promoting the program and he's really going to get involved with the students and try to get some enthusiasm and start some new things. I'm very optimistic about it. Another thing from a budget standpoint that has helped us is that the NCAA TV package was upheld going into this year so we know we're going to get one football game. It looks to us like, right now, that now our TV revenue should be up over what we budgeted. Again, we're optimistic that we're going to have a good year and get the financial situation behind us.

Q. Do you think selling the students reserved seats will bring in a substantial amount of money?

A. That's going to be an unknown. I really don't know what kind of reaction we're going to get from it. We're going to work very closely with Student Government because I think, again we won't know until it happens, but there are probably a number of very rabid fans who will say, 'yes I am paying a student fee, but it still would be worth it to pay some kind of fee to have a reserved seat.' Until we do it, I just don't know what kind of demand we're going to have for it. I think if we keep it reasonable I think there will be some student demand and that students that purchase it will feel like it's a good investment. Again, we'll just have to wait and see. I think those kind of things are very hard to predict what will be the outcome.

Q. Aside from men's tennis and women's golf, are there any other programs that are being curtailed or are the larger affected in administration like you said?

A. We've looked basically at every budget and I would say everybody has been affected to some extent. It might be in travel -- trying to schedule things closer to home or more home events. In some cases it has been not as much scholarship money as they would like to have. We've tried to cut back in publications. We've revised for instance, our basketball program to try to save money in there. We've revised our media guides. So it's been for the most part across-the-board. We've tried to look at everything and equipment -- we've cut back on just the absolute essentials in terms of equipment. Very little or no new uniforms unless it was absolutely necessary.

Q. You said earlier you couldn't really comment about the deficit. I've heard rumors circulating that the amount could go as high as $525,000. Is there anyway you could clarify that?

A. I wouldn't know how to comment on that other than to indicate that the figures we've been talking about since we recognized the problem, and the figures that we have submitted to the Board of Regents in terms of what we're carrying over from one year to the next, I think have been fairly accurate in terms of our projections. I'm not using the term deficit but just our projections in terms of outstanding bills and our timetable for payment.

Q. Have the results of the state audit on the 1982-83 budget been released?

A. No. I have not seen any information from last fall's audit. We have not, as the Athletic Department has not, seen the results and to my knowledge and I'm fairly certain on this, I don't think the University has seen a report on that audit either. I do know this, I think that from what I've heard, the state staff in terms of the auditing staff is understaffed and I think that they've been pretty tied up on a lot of projects. We've haven't seen any results of that audit.

Car maintenance: Treating it nice for a price

By Sharon I. Mitchell

What you don't know about your car can hurt you physically and financially, according to a free auto care manual by Fram Corporation, but Ron Samples, owner of Auto Tech in Huntington, said there are several things a car owner can do to avoid problems.

Transmission fluid, engine oil, radiator coolant and hoses to the radiator need to be checked periodically, he said.

"Whenever you get gas, have someone check all fluid levels. With self-serve gas, nobody does it these days," he said.

"Don't place total credibility on your warning lights," Samples said. "People that have had their car for a while get the feel of it and can sense when there is a problem from the sound, feel, vibration or lack of power."

Those who aren't knowledgeable about car repair should take their vehicles to someone they trust, Samples said.

"Word-of-mouth, a business which excels -- that's the key to looking for good services," he said. "Find a repair service that will stand behind its work."

The shop should find out what's wrong with the car and tell you. The shop should give you an estimate on parts and labor, guarantee you that the repair was based on that estimate and that what they did will repair the problem. With this information a person can make the decision on whether to have his car fixed." The customer and the shop should also have an understanding at the beginning that the shop will absorb the cost if they haven't repaired the problem. Otherwise, the customer should go elsewhere, he said.

Samples emphasized that going to the repair shop with a written set of instructions on exactly what is to be done, and nothing else, can result in the problem not being repaired. If the shop is told there is a rattle in the car and the customer says the exhaust pipe is loose and to only fix that, that is what will be done, he said.

If that doesn't solve the problem, then the shop can't be blamed because the shop did what the customer said to do, Samples said.

"If you don't let me do what I'm most capable of with my experienced technicians and equipment, then you can't blame me if the problem hasn't been fixed," he said.

"Describe the symptoms to the shop," he said. "Tell them to check the car out and advise you what is wrong, specifically, and what the total cost of repair will be, including labor."

Owner's manuals say the car must be serviced by an authorized dealer, but Samples said to use your own judgment on manufacturers' recommendations.

"Go to someone who can advise you what maintenance is important to do that the owner's manual requires and what's not," Samples said. "Manufacturers support their outlets for two reasons. First, for the outlet to sell their product. Secondly, manufacturers are in business to sell replacement parts to dealerships. As a result, the mark-up is very high on manufacturer parts. For good replacement parts, go to a good repair shop. They can rebuild your carburetor and have a good brand of alternators and starters. Those are the parts that I don't recommend you buy at a parts house."

"These kids are down at Marshall to study, not to worry about their cars. I have a daughter in college and I would hope that students like her would be able to find a good repair shop for preventive maintenance."

Not knowing the ins and outs of what goes on under a car's hood can be enough to make a person want to throw up his or her hands in frustration. That seems to be the case in this photo by Jeff Seager.

In Brief

Vuillaume Trio to perform tonight

Two Marshall University faculty members will be performing a classical concert Tuesday night in the Smith Recital Hall at 8 p.m. as part of The Vuillaume Trio.

James McWhorter, who plays cello, is a music instructor and conductor of the Marshall University Symphony, and Kenneth H. Marchant, pianist, is an assistant professor of music here.

Stephen Heyde, violinist, is the third member of the trio. He serves as a faculty member at West Virginia University and is concertmaster of the West Virginia Symphonette.

The concert is free for any student with a validated Marshall ID and is free for faculty and staff. General admission is $4 and $2 for subscribers to the Baxter or Forum series.

Two MU faculty members get Ph.D's

Two Marshall University faculty members recently received doctoral degrees, according to Provost Olen E. Jones, Jr.

Steven G. Cody, assistant professor of psychology received his Ph.D. degree May 2 from the University of Connecticut, and Morris Coats, economics instructor, received his doctorate from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University on June 11.

Cody's dissertation is called, "The Stability and Impact of the Primary Representational System in Neurological Programming: A Critical Examination." Coats' is entitled, "Voter Participation in Nineteenth Century British Parliamentary Elections."

Eleven COLA openings filled

Eleven of the 14 faculty openings in the College of Liberal Arts have been filled, according to Dean Alan B. Gould.

Gould said the college was still recruiting for one position in the Department of English and would readvertise for a replacement for School of Journalism Director Deryl R. Leaming. One position in the Department of Speech will be filled in the fall by a part-time instructor.

The other 11 faculty positions have been filled.

"We've been working hard," Gould said.

Fall enrollment of new students up

By Tamela Baker

The number of new student admissions for the fall semester at Marshall is up this year over last year, according to figures released by the Office of Admissions.

Freshman full-time student admissions were up in all colleges except the Community College as of July 1. The number of freshmen admitted to study part-time was up by 36 over the July 1, 1982 figure. The total number of freshmen admitted to the university as of July 1 was 2,575. The number of freshman admissions on July 1, 1982 was 2,418, indicating an increase of 157 so far for 1983.

Poet to give free lecture tonight

George Starbuck, American poet, will present a free lecture on contemporary poetry at 8 p.m. tonight in Corbly Hall 104.

The author of six volumes of poetry, Starbuck is an English professor at Boston University.

The lecture is sponsored by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, and is part of the English Department's Writer-in-Residency program, according to Dr. John J. McKernan, English professor and director of writing.

Graduate tuition waivers available

A limited number of graduate and professional tuition waivers will be available for the fall term, according to Graduate School Dean Robert F. Maddox.

Graduate tuition waiver application forms are available in the Graduate School or Finance offices. The Graduate School Office will begin accepting completed forms next week, he said.

Professional tuition waiver applications may be obtained from the dean's office in the Medical Education Building at the Veterans Administration branch of the medical school.

Waivers cover tuition, registration and Higher Education Resource Fees, and students who received waivers this summer must reapply for fall if they wish to be considered, Maddox said.

ted to the university is also higher than last year. The total number of transfer students admitted as of July 1 was 394, 111 more than the July 1, 1982 figure of 283, with all colleges except the College of Education reporting increases.

The number of in-state admissions has increased by 233 over the 1982 figure and the number of out-of-state admissions has increased by 37. International student admissions have increased by 130.

The number of women admitted to the university is down, however, from 1,721 in July 1982 to 1,678 in 1983, while the number of men admitted has risen from 1,141 in 1982 to 1,454 in 1983.

The total number of students admitted had risen from 2,862 on July 1, 1982 to 3,132 on July 1, 1983, for a total increase of 270. Figures for the month of July were not available at press time.

Admissions Director Dr. James W. Harless said he had been concerned about the effect faculty resignations would have on the number of new student applications, but was more concerned about the money situation and the effect of layoffs and unemployment would have on the number of students coming to school. But Harless noted that even though admissions were down to 2,862 in 1982 from 2,951 in 1981, admissions in most colleges are up this year over the 1981 figures as well.

Yearbook additions ready for students

Spring supplements to the 1982-83 Chief Justice Yearbook have arrived and will be distributed this fall, according to Betsy B. Cook, former adviser to the yearbook.

Approximately 200 of the 2,500 supplements will be mailed to students who graduated in May 1983 or who will be off campus this fall, Cook said.

The 32-page black and white supplements contain events from mid-February to the beginning of May and include May graduation.

The supplements will be placed in marked Parthenon boxes during the first two weeks of the fall semester for persons who have yearbooks to pick up, Cook said.

She said the usual practice of setting up a table to give students yearbooks by checking their names off a computer list is too time-consuming and that because the supplement is part of a book, it would be of little interest to students without yearbooks.

The supplements have an adhesive strip so they may be inserted into the backs of the yearbooks.
